WASHINGTON, January 24.

The House was called to order at 10 order at 1 o'clock a. m., when but a few members were present. The discussion of the electoral bill was at once resumed, and Messra. Harker, Partridge and Felton spoke in favor of the bill, and against the claim that the President of the Senate had a right to count the electoral vote.

Mr. MILLS opposed the bill, yet said there were some good things in it. It silenced the pretence that the President of the Senate had the power to count the vote.

At the expiration of Mr. Mills' time the point of order was raised. He could not speak more than ten minutes according to the agreement made yesterday, but after some discussion his time was extended to some discussion his time was extended to this judge, whom Democrats have taken one hour, and four o'clock was fixed as the great pains to show to be unbiased. I shall time for calling the previous question. Mr. LAMAR followed, saying the policy of the opposition was in the assumption that the power claimed either on one hand for both houses or on the other for the Viceresident to count the votes, was a legislative act by a legislative body. It could not do an act without having the President approve that action. It was an organized or better interpretation of it, I say "God body, clothed with a single function to speed" to him.
